INSTITUTE FOR POLICY INTEGRITY OPENS NEW WASHINGTON, D.C. OFFICE, TO BE LED BY MARTHA ROBERTS

Roberts will bring extensive government experience to the NYU institute

The Institute for Policy Integrity at New York University School of Law is opening a new office in Washington, D.C., and has hired Martha Roberts as Director of the D.C. Office. Roberts has held previous roles at the White House Office of Management and Budget, the U.S. Senate, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), and Environmental Defense Fund.

"To better navigate this tumultuous period for climate and energy policy, we are deepening our presence in the nation's capital with the launch of this new office, and we are excited to have Martha Roberts lead it," said Don Goodson, Executive Director of the Institute for Policy Integrity. "The new office will bolster our ability to engage with developments on Capitol Hill, meet with federal policymakers, and collaborate more closely with a range of D.C.-based organizations."

"Martha is well equipped to help launch our office in the nation's capital so that we can enhance our engagement with the federal government and the dense ecosystem of researchers and policy professionals in D.C.," said Richard Revesz, the Institute's Faculty Director and Co-Founder. "Martha is a brilliant lawyer with extensive experience in government. We will benefit greatly from her extraordinary legal and policy skills, deep knowledge of institutions, and effective leadership."

Martha Roberts served as Senior Counselor in the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs within the Office of Management and Budget during the Biden Administration, where she worked closely with Revesz. Previously, she worked as a Professional Staff Member on the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Interior, Environment, and Related Agencies, where she oversaw the EPA budget; as a Senior Advisor for Climate and Energy to Senator Michael Bennet; and as an attorney with Environmental Defense Fund and EPA.

"I am excited to build out the new office in Washington, D.C., and expand the Institute's already strong network here," said Roberts. "In my past roles, I have seen how sound government decisionmaking can improve people's lives. I look forward to contributing to the Institute's impactful work in this area."

In addition to Roberts, the Institute will have several permanent staff members located in Washington, including new Director of Economic Policy Al McGartland, who was hired last month after serving as EPA's lead economist for decades.
